Grants & Funding

Telstra has announced the Connected Communities Grant Program, supporting Australia's remote, rural, and regional communities with $600,000 to foster inclusion and resilience over the next three years.

In partnership with the Foundation for Rural & Regional Renewal, grants of up to $10,000 are available to not-for-profits to help them build resilient, sustainable, and liveable communities.

The program has three themes:

Resilient communities that are well prepared and socially connected, with the ability to renew and recover together when disaster strikes;

Sustainable communities that are diverse and inclusive, through planning for the health, wellbeing and prosperity of their people and planet;

Liveable communities that have digital capability, helping to equip people with the skills to live, learn and work in a digital society.

Funds will be available for new or existing not-for-profit programs to help them scale their impact to help more Australians in rural and regional areas become better connected.

Applications for the 2023 Telstra Connected Communities grant round will open at 9am on Wednesday 1st of March 2023 and will close at 5pm on Thursday 30th of March 2023. This first round will make $200,000 available for applications of up to $10,000 each. Successful grants will be announced in June 2023 and successful applicants will have 12 months to complete funded projects.

Pioneers of Yilgarn

Stage 1.

Citizens who built this district between years 1887 and 1914

Cohn, Isador James Knight: 'Alphabetical' Cohn came to Southern Cross in 1889 to manage the Central mine. He left mining to start up several businesses in town on behalf of a consortium that included Alex Forrest, brother of Sir John.

Firstly a billiard room, then the Club Hotel, then five shops where the supermarket is today. Being a warm supporter of the Forrest government ensured he was the recipient of many lucrative mail contracts and hotel licenses throughout the fledgling Eastern Goldfields.

He became rich and influential, being honoured by riding in the second vehicle of a mile-long convoy when the Railway reached Coolgardie. During this time he stayed in Southern Cross, serving three years as Mayor and several years as Chairman of the Road Board.

He was instrumental in many improvements including the New Zealand Gully town water supply and Council Chambers. He was also a Justice of the Peace and did his turn on the Bench, being noted for sticking up for 'the little man.' In 1900 he moved to Coolgardie which was more central to his operations. His legacy is the foundation stone outside Council Chambers.

'Sounds Like' it's time to quit smoking

On Sunday 12 February 2023, Cancer Council WA's Make Smoking History Program launched a new WA-made campaign, Sounds Like, which asks people to listen to their bodies for the sounds and signs to quit smoking.

If you smoke, you will be all too familiar with the health impacts in the advertisements, which range from smoker's cough to bleeding gums. These common concerns may lead to life-long consequences, like severe breathlessness or loss of teeth.

The good news is, as soon as you quit smoking, your body starts to repair itself. Becoming a non-smoker is the single most important thing you can do for your health. There are more benefits too, like saving money and protecting your loved ones from secondhand smoke. When you quit, you're setting yourself up for more quality time with the people you love most.

It's never too late to quit. Get started today:

- Visit www.makesmokinghistory.org.au/tips for all the best tips to quit and stay quit
- Try our free, interactive quit planner
- Download the free My QuitBuddy app
- Chat to your GP, Aboriginal Health Worker or Pharmacist
- Call the Quitline on 13 7848 or chat online at quitlinewa.org.au

Australian Government

Fact Sheet

Small cells are being installed near my home. What do I need to know?

Small cells are smaller sized telecommunications equipment used to improve local coverage, add capacity and support new or enhanced mobile services in our communities. In most cases, small cells use low-powered radio transmitters that emit radiofrequency electromagnetic energy (RF EME) at levels below those identified by the Government as being safe for Australians to live, work and study near everyday. You might have seen small cells mounted to fixtures like street lights, power poles or bus stations.

Why am I hearing so much about small cells?

Part of the reason is 5G. It is the newest generation of technology for mobile phone networks and telecommunications companies are rolling out new small cell infrastructure. This will enable customers to realise the benefits of the new technology for themselves, such as fast downloads, higher data limits, and reduced delay in loading content. Broader benefits mean the new technology can be used for new applications that need a lot of data, such as working from home, or remote health services.

So, small cells are new?

Small cells are not new. They have been an essential part of telecommunications infrastructure for more than a decade and complement the larger macro mobile phone network to improve coverage, add capacity and support new or enhanced services and experiences, such as 5G, in localised areas.

Who installs these small cells?

The Government implemented laws allowing telecommunications companies like Telstra, Optus and Vodafone/TPG to install telecommunications infrastructure specified as low-impact facilities, such as small cells, on private or public land and infrastructure and set rules for the way in which telecommunications companies go about these installation activities. The Industry Code for Mobile Phone Base Station Deployment requires telecommunications companies to notify landowners and occupiers of proposed installations on their land or infrastructure, and to notify the community in the immediate vicinity.

And who's responsible for regulating them?

The Australian Communications and Media Authority (ACMA) can check to ensure telecommunications companies comply with the notification requirements in the Industry Code and can also check the levels of RF EME emitted from small cells, or other telecommunications facilities, are below the maximum level of safe exposure identified in the relevant Radiofrequency Standard set by the Australian Radiation Protection and Nuclear Safety Agency (ARPANSA).

But are they safe?

Small cells are subject to the same regulations as equipment used in all other mobile phone base stations, devices and other telecommunications equipment. When operating within the levels set out in ARPANSA's Radiofrequency Standard, small cells and other telecommunications infrastructure are safe.
